

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Goes to a Matinee and Sees Things—Many Things—Haig Gudenian, Armenian Violinist, Will Play at Art Alliance March 21

WAR does make a difference, doesn't it? It brings out the best side of people, and does away with a lot of conventions. I stopped in at a matinee yesterday and, besides seeing a young romance in the bud, had a great old time philosophizing. You see, just at the opening scene of the show, the lights went thoroughly, utterly and entirely (though not quite, perhaps) OUT. Well, first the orchestra demanded in audible tones, "Lights, lights!" Then the audience began to laugh and the galleries whistled to the lights and perhaps to the chorus girls whose dim figures could be seen as they peeped out from the side lines. War gives you such an at-home feeling. Does it not? In regular times, the chorus girls would not have done that, they'd have been afraid of giving the public more than it had paid for. But yesterday, bless your heart, they did not mind when the lights went up suddenly and the audience saw their retreating figures as they turned back to wait until the proper note was played for them to enter. But perhaps (and I really think it's not perhaps, but about certain) a certain little brown-haired maid and her fair-haired staway from that particular matinee, or that they had stopped to think that the lights might go up suddenly. So that as it may, the lights did go up suddenly and—well, he had just stolen a kiss; in fact he only about got half a one, for the lights (those mean things) came right up bright as they had ever been. I don't think any one else saw them, but they were a bit out of the way; but, of course, Nancy does keep her eyes open. If she didn't, how could she pass these little rumors to you? Never mind, D—, Nancy won't tell on you, even after it's announced, but tell her first won't you, since she's so nice to you.

I HAVE been hearing very wonderful things about the young Armenian violinist, Haig Gudenian, who is going to play at the Art Alliance on Thursday afternoon, March 21, for the love of his country. Some of the numbers Mr. Gudenian has planned to play on Thursday include several that have been arranged by himself. Among these is a "Cradle Song of Eghine," "Alaguzat," which is the song of the girls of the Caucasus, Russia, and an "Armenian Wedding March."

You know, before the war the Armenians did not allow their women to work outside of the home for a living, which has always been provided for them by the men, so the young girl stayed at home until her marriage. Naturally to her, the wedding day, when she left home for the first time, is some trial, made worse by the fact that the marriages were made by the parents and the girl therefore had no choice. The music of the wedding march is typical of all this, and as the young bride is led to the church the violin seems trying to console her, while the piano imitates the notes of the Oriental musical instruments and the sound of the church bells. Perhaps the war has changed this. It must have, for the Armenians have no homes now. They are poor refugees.

How little American girls realize the lives of women in some of the other countries. Think of walking out of your home to church to meet the man who is to be your life companion, whether you love him or not, to meet him for the first time when it is too late to draw back, in other words, at the altar. Aren't you glad you are an American and live in a land where a man has a right to ask and a woman a right to say yes or no to his asking her to be his wife.

Really, I think the afternoon of Armenian music will be very wonderful. It's given under the direction of the Armenian committee of the Emergency Aid and under the auspices of the Art Alliance. Miss Lena Weber, a contralto, will contribute to the enjoyment of the afternoon, and later Persian tea and coffee and Oriental sweets will be served.

When I first heard of it I understood it was planned for today (this Thursday), but it was named for the 21st and the 21st it is to be.

THE Plays and Players Club is certainly an institution in this town, is it not? It is so alive, so full of vim and up to the minute about everything, and aren't its informal club nights fun?

It appears that the nightly performances at the Y. M. C. A. Hut in League Island have been rather handicapped because there is no drop curtain for the stage. The Plays and Players have given several plays down there, and all told there is a party of one kind or another every evening at 7:30 o'clock in the hut. They tell me the men are so eager to attend these entertainments that the seats begin to fill from 5:30 on, and when 7:30 is marked on the clock there are actually men in the doorway who hang to the rafters of the hut in order to see the performance.

The Plays and Players realizing the necessity for a curtain have presented the Y. M. C. A. with a beautiful velvet one, which now materially (I don't mean to be funny) assists in the general giving of the performances in an adequate and satisfactory manner.

CRACKING further of the Plays and Players, it is going to hold one of its delightful informal teas at the club rooms on Sunday afternoon, March 17, at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Robert Geddes is chairman of these afternoons and they are always most gladsome affairs. Let's go!

Social Activities
Mrs. Charles De Costa will hold the fancy dress meeting of her dancing class tomorrow afternoon at Asher's.

Captain Benjamin Chew, U. S. R., who is stationed at Kansas City, is spending a short vacation with Mrs. Chew at their town home, 114 Rittenhouse street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Struthers Ellis and Mrs. Ellis returned to their home in Philadelphia today after spending part of the winter at Cape May for the spring and summer.

April 17, 18 and 19 are the three days the Savoy company has decided upon to give its annual play, which this year will be given in conjunction with the Plays and Players at the Little Theatre. The Plays and Players will have the first evening, assisted by the Savoy company, while the last two evenings will be given over to the Savoy and the Plays and Players will assist. The proceeds will be given over to the Pennsylvania Railroad women's division war relief.

The Savoy company will present the same play which it gave in 1915, "A Trial by Jury," and Mr. Philip Warren Cooke will give the part of the judge. Miss Helen Buchanan will be the bride and Mr. Clarence Brinton will have the part of the judge. It will be remembered that Miss Buchanan, Mr. Cooke and Mr. Brinton acted these principal characters when the play was given before.

Instead of the usual three months in which to rehearse, this year the rehearsals will start Tuesday evening, March 19, and will continue every Tuesday and Thursday evening until April 17.

Mr. Joseph Craig Fox is stage director and Mr. William Stanley Muschamp is musical director.

Next Monday there will be a most interesting entertainment given under the auspices of the West Philadelphia unit of the women's committee, Council of National Defense, at the Philomusian Club, 3944 Walnut street, at 3 o'clock.

The program will consist of a short address by Miss Agnes Reppeler, followed by a lecture given by Mr. Edward H. Leick on the causes of the war and the reasons for our participation therein. There will be a delightful musical interlude during which Mrs. Edwin Watrons will sing "Kiaki Samson" and quartet and band from the Naval Home will give patriotic and other selections.

The members of the Southern Industrial Home held a meeting at the New Century Club on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Tea was served later in the afternoon, at which Mrs. W. H. Hollar and Mrs. W. R. Meredith were the hostesses.

Psi Omega, dental fraternity of the University of Pennsylvania, which has its home at 4939 Chestnut street, will give its annual dance at the Adelphi next Friday night. The committee in charge includes Mr. Clyde Boughton, Mr. Rubie Miller, Mr. David

A very novel tea was given at the home of Miss Florence Clarke on Saturday afternoon for the benefit of the Lenten offering of the Episcopal Church. It was called a measuring tea, for as each guest arrived she was invited to stand against the wall and have her height measured, after which she was asked to contribute a penny for every inch. Of course, it was rather hard on the tall people, and for once the short ones didn't try to add an inch to their height by standing on tiptoe. The tea was most enjoyable and there was music besides. Miss Olive Mason sang several solos, accompanied by Miss Dorothy McEwen. Miss Anna Herr also sang and there were some bright recitations. The girls who gave the tea, under Miss Clarke's direction, were Miss Dorothy Lee Power, Miss Marian Martin, Miss Marie Volker, Miss Alice Rue, Miss Beatrice Lyle, Miss Josephine Sprout, Miss Eleanor Musselman and Miss Judith McComb.

Rummage Sale Today for Wayne Branch of Red Cross
And still another rummage sale. From present indications it would seem that the public never gets quite enough of rummage sales, arranged for one charity or another. A sale of this description has been planned to take place today in Wayne for the benefit of the Wayne branch of the American Red Cross. This branch has always been self-supporting and they are very anxious to keep it so. They turn out on an average 10,000 surgical dressings and other hospital requisites a month and 800 knitted garments. So it is easy to see how much money it takes to buy supplies.

The committee in charge consists of Mrs. Charles Young, chairman; Mrs. H. C. Stone, Mrs. Guy Willey, Mrs. Daniel M. Schaeffer, Mrs. Thomas Hulme, Mrs. Frederick Jiggins, Mrs. W. W. Pickerton, Mr. C. C. Lester, Mrs. E. S. Schultz, Mrs. Edward Tingle and Mrs. W. Allen Barr.

throughout the country after tomorrow and will last for the rest of the month. President Wilson, honorary president of this organization, has congratulated the 100-000 Camp Fire Girls on their efficient work in countless directions to help win the war.

A typical patriotic program has been made up to suit the occasion. Among some of the features to be shown tonight will be one in the form of a patriotic red, white and blue candle-lighting ceremony, salute of the flags of our Allies, Pageant of Health chart and call of humanity. Many of the Camp Fire Girls will be clad in patriotic costumes.

Mrs. I. H. O'Hara, member of the board of counselors of the Camp Fire Girls, will address the gathering in the Philomusian Club. Her theme will deal with a timely patriotic subject. The awarding of special prizes to the girls will close the celebration.

Meetings of Various Clubs and Red Cross Classes
There was a meeting of the Philadelphia Auxiliary of the Southern Industrial Educational Association at the New Century Club, on Tuesday at 3:30 o'clock. Tea was served. Mrs. Hollar and Mrs. Meredith received.

The navy auxiliary of the Ogonts and Huntingdon Valley branch of the Red Cross has delivered at the Navy Yard during the month of February a total of 298 garments, and already during the month of March fifty articles have been sent in. The work in the Wyncote, Abington and Rydal sections has been taken up in the most satisfactory manner. The weekly meetings of the committee of counselors of the Camp Fire Girls, will address the gathering in the Philomusian Club. Her theme will deal with a timely patriotic subject. The awarding of special prizes to the girls will close the celebration.

The Wyncote section of the Ogonts and Huntingdon Valley branch of the Red Cross gave "An Afternoon with Robert Louis Stevenson" at All Hallows' parish house, conducted by Mrs. Herbert Munsey, assisted by Mrs. Frederick Cooper yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Hunting a Husband

CHAPTER XI
Holding One's Own

I MET Captain Donovan frankly. He laughed and talked naturally. Probably he was quite used to kissing girls in the moonlight. It was I who was unused.

So Wilfred Hale and I with our tennis racquets, the Captain and "Foe" strolled off. The sun was too hot to walk through the gardens, so we chose a little lane. A shady lane it was, with grass growing up in the wagon-ruts.

The Captain and Wilfred Hale were talking in the moonlight. "Foe" looking like a picture on the cover of a summer magazine, spoke now and then. What she did say was quite innane. Pretty she was—the least interested observer could see that. But brain—why she had not a vestige! She would be charming to flirt with in the moonlight—to talk silly nothings to—to play with as a pretty toy. But in the morning light, lacking the romance of moonlight, she was childishly—almost tiresome.

But perhaps it was this that men wanted? Prettiness—such as a bisque doll may have. A girl who can bluff, not intelligently perhaps but with an upward glance through thick eyelashes, that is wholly charming. Well, I would see. If it was this—I was out of it wholly. I must admit it and hasten back to my desk in the office—or another office.

Wilfred Hale was speaking about one of the new books, Wells' latest novel, to the Captain. They were both interested. They discussed its realism, its handling of the war, and its ending.

"Eye said, 'I thought it was silly.'"

"Did you read it through?" asked the Captain, switching at the green branches with a stick.

"No, I didn't," she said, "it was so stupid in the beginning."

The Captain smiled politely. But I felt I had translated his smile. "Women have no brains."

"I liked it," I spoke in the little pause that followed the Captain's smile.

"Why did you like it?" Wilfred Hale asked. "I think it solves one of the questions we are all searching to answer in these days. It makes you think. You realize that you are not struggling alone!" I stopped breathing.

"Ah," said the Captain. "I can see you liked it. And so you are struggling, too?"

The Captain smiled. "I am not a woman who knows by intuition. An expression of awakened interest. In my case of renewed interest."

My heart beat a little faster. The Captain stepped to my side. Gradually our pace slackened. We were dwelling behind, yes, and talking. He was talking to me keenly, interestedly—almost as if I were another man.

I listened eagerly. But as I listened the words kept saying themselves to me over and over. "So it pays to be intelligent."

But in its length I felt I had succeeded. I had discovered something new and thrilling to me. I had my own way against the prettiest girl in the house-party.
